Sometimes what you do in your country might not be wrong but if you do the same thing in other countries, it might be impolite or disrespectful. Here are some different cultural taboos the in ASEAN Community.

In Brunei Darussalam, you shouldn't wear yellow clothes. Because it's the color of the King. Moreover, don't point to any person with your forefinger but instead use your thumb instead.

When you go to Cambodia, you shouldn't stare at anyone, eye contact for too long is disrespectful to people.

People normally don't use spoons to eat in Indonesia, they eat barehanded.

In Laos, women have to wear "Sarongs", the national clothing, when you go to contact the government officers. Another thing you don't do in Laos is give perfume as a gift.

You should practice eating right handed if you want to go to Malaysia.

In Myanmar, giving business cards with two hands is what you should do to be polite. However, what you shouldn't do is wear socks and shoes in the temple.

It's weird to point at things without hands or fingers. But if you want to visit the Philippines, you should point at things with your lips.

In Singapore, you should be on the left hand side when you're on the escalator.

In Vietnam, a big rule is don't take photos of any buildings of the government and also don't take photos in groups of three. It's believed that if you do so, there is one person in the picture who will die.

Thailand, is really well known as the land of smiles. And people greet each other with a "Wai"
